From Manzkcrter Courier, April, 1888. Li, An-addition which has just been made to the United States National Museum at Washington, affords important subsidiary evidence, if such were needed, -of the unique interest- attending the extraordinary exhibition at Manchester illustrative of the Wild West. -Naturalists, 7-, have not too soon become alive to the remarkable fact that those shaggy monarchs of the prairie, the ponderous buffalo tribe, are well nigh extinct. They have dwindled away before the exter-1 shakes beneath the impetuous advance of the mighty herd, and even individual specimens are becoming. scarce. Therepresentatives of the Smithsonian Museum in America therefore sentout an expedition into the West in search of what buffaloes there might be remaining, in order. that. the country might preserve some-memento of the l11lii0IIS of thoseanimals, which not many T. years ago roamed over the prairies. Twenty-five animals in all were captured, six of which have -l. been arranged in a group for exhibition. One of the American papers describesvthis as the : transference of a littlebit of Montana--a small square patch from the wildest part-of the Wild;f l;--West---to the National Museum. The idea is one whichgis exactly applicable to Commit. W; F. ConYs collection, which is approaching its last days of residence...
