Among the Celtic nation, the new moon nearest to the winter solstices was peculiarly celebrated. The chief Druid went into the woods on that night, and cut with a golden sickle a branch of the mistletoe of the oak, called Ghiah, in the Celtic. The people also cut branches for themselves, and carried them home, after they had been blessed by the chief Druid, whence the usage of adorning our churches with evergreens. In France, at the Christmas gambols, as late as the reign of Louis XIV. , when they were suppressed on account of their irregularities, traces of the Druidical usages were found. A man, personating a prince (roi follet, a mummer), set out from the...
