University of Texas Press. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 300 pages. Dimensions: 8.8in. x 5.8in. x 0.9in. These Texas stories are among the best produced by the states writers in the mid-twentieth century. Selected above all for their artistic excellence and their narrative mastery, they also present a vital picture of the Southwest in microcosm, as revealed in its largest state. Texas and Texas writing moved from a Southern orientation in the 1940s reflected here in works by William Goyen, William Humphrey, and others to the strong Southwestern flavor of stories by such authors as Larry McMurtry and A. C. Greene to, finally, urban or Sunbelt Texas, mirrored in the edgy, sometimes experimental prose of Doug Crowell, William Harrison, and Peter LaSalle. Here are stories by such celebrated authors as Paul Horgan and William A. Owens, as well as startling, in some cases previously unpublished work by writers like Harryette Mullen, Naomi Shihab Nye, Pat Ellis Taylor, and Thomas Zigar. A few stories may already be favorites Larry McMurtrys There Will Be Peace in Korea, Amado Muros Cecilia Rosas. Many others have become classics, such as Vassar Millers poignantly autobiographical Pact, Hughes Rudds hilarious record of grade school fieldtrips, R. E. Smiths gripping story of a Houstonians life-changing encounter with nature, and Dave Hickeys astonishing account of an old cowboys imprisonment . . . in a bathtub. Bill Brett, James Crumley, Linda West Eckhardt, Robert Flynn, Mary Gray Hughes, Carolyn Osbornall are represented here by stories guaranteed to banish stereotypes and boredom and to enlarge ones vision of the Lone Star State. Anyone who thinks that oil wells and big hair define Texas will find out differently in the dazzling short fiction presented in South by Southwest. This item ships from multiple locations. Your book may arrive from Roseburg, OR, La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
